

your case to the Office for the Independent Adjudicator (OIA) as long as it is within their remit, and you apply within the relevant timescales.

25. If your enrolment ends, either because it is terminated by the University or because you decide to withdraw, the University is not liable for any loss or damage which you suffer in relation to this, as long as it has acted in accordance with its published policies and procedures.
26. The Offer of a place at the University will be withdrawn, without penalty to the University, if:
 - a. after you have accepted an Offer there is a change in your circumstances or if the University becomes aware of information not previously known to it (including, but not limited to, information about criminal convictions, subject to the Rehabilitation of Offenders Act 1974) which in the reasonable opinion of the University makes it inappropriate for you to study on the course; or
 - b. in the reasonable opinion of the University, you have supplied false or misleading information relating to your application for the course.

These conditions will continue to apply after you have started the course.

27. The University will use all reasonable endeavours to deliver the course in accordance with the description applied to it in the University's Course Handbook for the academic year in which you begin the course. However, the University has finite resources which must be managed in an efficient way, in the context of the provision of a wide range of courses to a large number of students. In addition, the University needs to ensure that all courses are kept up to date, taking account of developments in the discipline, and in technology. Accordingly, the University may, exceptionally, seek to amend the course of study so that it better meets the needs of students. If this change takes place after your enrolment, the University will discuss the change with you or your elected representatives. In all cases, the University endeavours to ensure that any change is in the student interest.
28. There may be some rare occasions where, for reasons beyond the University's control, some aspects of the terms and conditions of enrolment are changed. This could be because of changes to Government legislation; the establishment of legal precedent in relation to matters of health and safety or other forms of compliance; or because of circumstances sometimes described as Acts of God (including fire, flood, earthquake, storm, hurricane or other natural disaster), or war or other military or civil disorder, industrial action, or the failure of electricity, internet or telephone service. In such extremely rare cases, the University will keep you informed of any changes and the reason for it, but may not be able to consult with you. The University undertakes that it will take reasonable steps to minimise any impact on you and your experience, and will give timely notification of any change which it has been necessary to make.
29. The University is registered as a Data Controller by the Information Commissioner's Office (ICO). It only uses your data in accordance with its legal obligations. The University's Data Protection Policy is available on the website, and you should read the Data Processing Notice before you enrol to ensure you are aware of how your data will be used.